

Beautiful Ride in Fayetteville this Saturday!

Is this email not displaying correctly?

View it in your browser.

THANKS to all of you who offered to move your volunteer date up to help us provide the best of support you all deserve. We'll be in great shape - as long as everyone who has volunteered shows up.

This week, we have our longest drive of the season so you need to get up early but it's definitely worth it! (There is an opportunity to stay very close to Fayetteville Friday night and sleep in -- if you eat fast - see the route below.)

We're heading to another small Texas town, Fayetteville. It's 25-30 minutes past Columbia so please allow plenty of time to arrive by 7:00 and please, please, please carpool! If you've never been to Fayetteville, just look at the picture above - that's our riders about 100 yards after the start of this ride getting ready to follow the arrow to the right and ride out of town. They won't see roads this flat shortly after they leave town...

Weather Alert!

Oh, Accuweather and Weather are both showing 40% chance of scattered AM thunderstorms so we will be monitoring the weather closely. It'll be landing the Friday update Friday morning. If the weather is still on the fence, we'll stay on track to ride.

Maybe we need to take up baseball as our current batting average is 5/7 or .714 which would be considered MVP territory but we're cyclists and we have a very high safety standard - and no retractable roofs overhead...

2014 Ready2Roll Cycling Training Series - Ride 4, Fayetteville, Mar 15, 8:00 am

This week, we're heading to the very pleasant and VERY cycling friendly town of Fayetteville to ride part of the actual @PG150 route as well as enjoy plenty of riding roads.